SPANISH VERB GAMES

Spanish Battleship Games

Verbs can be very difficult for students to master. Battleship gets them conjugating over and over and over again, and asking for one more round.

30 games, from the present tense to the subjunctive. Play one right here. No email, no sign-up.

PLAY IT NOW

Try it with your class today.

Project this page, divide your class into two teams and play. Each team has a hidden fleet. Pick a square, conjugate the verb, and if you get it right, you fire.

Team A Equipo A Team B Equipo B

A hit means you go again. A miss, or a wrong answer, passes the turn. Sink all three ships (3, 2 and 2 squares) to win. New game

HOW TO USE THESE GAMES

Ways to play:

Whole class. Project the interactive game and divide your class into two teams. Everyone is conjugating, and everyone is speaking the target language.

Small groups/pairs. Print the game boards. Students hide their ships, then call out a subject and a verb to fire. One student can have the answer sheet and serve as the moderator.

On their own devices. Share the interactive game with students. It opens in any browser.

Warm up first. Use the practice chart before you play, so students have the forms in front of them.

If you’re an independent learner, this is great. Play both teams yourself. It’s a great way to study and get lots of verb practice.

WHAT YOU GET

Every game comes with four pages.

All built the same way, so once your students know how to play one, they know how to play all 30.

QUESTIONS

Before you play.

Do I need to sign up to play the game on this page?

No. Play it as much as you like, with as many classes as you like.

What do I need for the interactive games?

A browser. Open the file on your computer and project it, or share it with students.

Can I change the verbs?

Yes. Every game comes as a Word file, so you can edit it to match what you're teaching.

What levels is this for?

The games start with regular present tense verbs and go all the way to the imperfect subjunctive, so there's a game for year one through your most advanced classes.
