Women in Uruguay: visibility and progress

- Phrase to practise: “las mujeres tienen acceso a puestos de trabajo altos” — note adjective placement and verb choice.

Economy, housing and education

On the economy, María describes Uruguay as stable and transparent, though affected by government changes and inflation. Regarding housing, she notes that while most people have housing, there remain precarious areas and cooperative housing efforts.

Education in Uruguay is “gratuita, obligatoria y laica” (free, mandatory and secular). The speaker mentions pros and cons: accessibility and school feeding programs are strengths; overcrowding and teacher wages are challenges.

- Useful terms: inflación, vivienda precaria, cooperativas de vivienda, sobrecarga (overcrowding).

Culture: parties, leisure and food

Parties in Uruguay tend to be calmer and smaller than mega-festivals; leisure often involves outdoor walks, beaches and social rituals like sharing mate. María describes mate as a cultural staple consumed with a bombilla and calling the herb “yerba”.

- Mate vocabulary: mate, yerba, bombilla, cebador (person who prepares mate).

- Food culture: emphasis on homemade dishes and strong street-food traditions from the Río de la Plata region.

Current events, family and the pandemic

María explains that current events include a recent change of government and ongoing pandemic effects. Family remains central—large Sunday meals and close intergenerational ties. On the pandemic, she reflects on the two faces of change: expanded digital connection but loss of freedom and increased fear.

“the main factor was fear... I imagined the world being more and more towards unity, not back towards disunity”
